120 Cars Melons Shipped by County Through Monday

54 Loaded From Hope; 40 From Washington 26 From Patmos

EXCEED LAST YEAR

Excelsior Given Test to Replace Hay as Packing Material

A total of 120 carloads of water-melons has been shipped from Hempstead county this season, a survey showed Monday.

Hope buyers loaded 54 cars. From Washington 40 cars were loaded. Patmos sent 26. All were routed over the Missouri Pacific to northern markets.

The shipping season started about two weeks ago, with opening prices ranging from 40 to 65 cents per hundred pounds. Price quotations Thursday were from 25 to 40 cents per hundred.

The peak of the harvest is over, but light movements will continue for the next 10 or 12 days, bringing the total carload shipments to around 150.

Hope buyers loaded 54 cars. From Washington 40 cars were loaded. Patmos sent 26. All were routed over the Missouri Pacific to northern markets.

Prices have held up better this season, due to greater demand, and better quality.

As an experimental move to bring about better prices to the grower, a saving to railroads in freight claims, and to stimulate business, three carloads of excelsior-packed melons will be shipped this week by A. C. Monts.

The excelsior is furnished free to determine whether excelsior or hay-packed melons bring the highest prices on arrival to market. A. E. Lamont, manager of an excelsior plant at Donaldson, is promoting the experiment.

Mr. Lamont and Dudley Haddock, secretary of the Arkansas State Chamber of Commerce, were here this week pointing out advantages to local shippers of excelsior-packed melons.

Martial Law for Trucking Strike

4,000 Guardsmen Called Out by Governor of Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. —(AP)—Four thousand national guardsmen established military rule here Thursday on the order of Governor Floyd B. Olson after warring factions in the truck drivers' strike failed to agree on final peace plans submitted by federal mediators.

The governor's decree followed acceptance of the peace plan by the drivers' union and a reply from the employers' advisory committee accepting some of the terms with reservation but rejecting the wage scale suggested.

Fergusons Face a Test on Saturday

They Will Try to Elect C. C. McDonald Governor of Texas

AUSTIN, Texas.—(AP)—The political genius that brought James E. Ferguson into prominence in Texas 20 years ago meets another test Saturday.

Throughout Texas, facing a Democratic primary on that date, the question is being asked can "Farmer Jim," seeking no office for himself or his wife, Gov. Miriam W. Ferguson, transmit his remarkable vote-getting powers to his favorite in the race for governor?

The Fergusons are retiring from office-holding, but they are not letting any political chips be returned in their quest for votes for C. C. McDonald, Wichita Falls lawyer and friend of long standing.

McDonald, James V. Alfred, attorney general; Edgar Witt, lieutenant governor; C. C. Small, state senator; Maury Hughes, former chairman of the state Democratic Executive Committee; and T. F. Hunter, oil man and lawyer, are the candidates of getting into the run-off primary.

Dillinger Aide Jumps to His Death

Probasco Helped Noted Outlaw Get His Face "Lifted"

Arrested, He Leaps From Window of Chicago Federal Building

DOCTOR IS HUNTED

Surgeon Who Altered Two Outlaws' Faces Sought by Police

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Brought to the office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for questioning in connection with the Dillinger case, James Probasco, 57, committed suicide Thursday by leaping from a 19th-story window to an alley below.

S. P. Cowley, in charge of the bureau in the absence of Melvin H. Purvis, said the government had been informed that Dillinger had his face lifted at Probasco's home, and that Homer Van Meter, a Dillinger lieutenant, also had a facial operation to change his appearance.

The doctor who did the work is being sought.

CHICAGO.—John Dillinger's money, the proceeds of his various bank robberies, was sought Wednesday by Coroner Frank Walsh, police and government officials and they reported no progress because of the flight of Polly Hamilton, last of the sweethearts of the bandit was slain last Sunday night.

Polly, who is 26, and was divorced last April by Roy Keefe, a former Gary (Ind.) policeman, vanished after she and Mrs. Anna Sage, keeper of many vice resorts, were bereft of their escort, the man both said they knew as John Dillinger, a Board of Trade man, and who was called "Dilly" by their friends because of his resemblance to his own pictures.

Coroner Walsh searched the apartment occupied by Mrs. Sage and her son, Steve Chiolak, at 2420 North Halsted street, just around the corner from the Biograph theater at 2433 Lincoln avenue in front of which Dillinger was killed. Two keys found in Dillinger's pockets were in the coroner's possession and one of them opened the front door to the apartment used as a trysting place by Dillinger and Polly. The other fitted the lock in a door of the linen closet.

Supervising Capt. John Horan who accompanied Coroner Walsh to the apartment questioned Chiolak, who is 23, relative to what effects Dillinger had kept in the place. Chiolak denied that Dillinger, or Lawrence, as he called him, had any of his personal effects there. There was a suspicion on the part of the authorities that it was in this apartment that Dillinger had secreted the machine gun, automatic pistol and bullet-proof vest found in Lake Michigan Tuesday.

Mrs. Sage, who turned out to be the "girl in red" of the Dillinger death scene, had denied to police that she had arranged with government officials to lure Dillinger into their ambush. She declared that both herself and Polly, whose picture was found in Dillinger's watch, were ignorant of the identity of their cavalier.

Doubting this, Capt. Thomas Duffy of the Sheffield avenue station, turned Mrs. Sage, who is 43, over to the custody of Government Agent S. P. Cowley. The fact that government agents had prevented Detective Frank Slattery from arresting the two women at the scene of the Dillinger death indicated to the police a previous arrangement by government agents with the two women.

The fact that Mrs. Sage, who formerly operated a hotel in Gary, at which Sergt. Martin Zerkovich of the East Chicago (Ind.) Police Department, was a resident guest, and that Zerkovich was credited with being the one who arranged the trap for Dillinger, suggested that Mrs. Sage had told him of her suspicion that "Polly's boy friend" was Dillinger.

Gathering Clouds Give Hope of Rain

Maximum Temperature Here Thursday at 2 p.m. Is 100½ Degrees

Scattered clouds brought hopes of rain to southern temperatures Thursday and Friday. The highest temperature Wednesday was 102-1-2.

The weather forecast for Thursday night and Friday was thundershowers with a slight drop in temperature.

By the Associated Press

Wind and rain combined to give some relief to parched fields, and the perspiring populace Wednesday, but the toll of death and damage continued to mount.

Fatalities listed as "heat deaths" reached 1,079 persons. Thousands of head of livestock have been destroyed and the market value of many additional thousands has been reduced during the past 16 days, while most of the nation has suffered from temperatures ranging around 100. Irreparable damage has resulted to crops in all the great producing areas.

Grain prices on the Chicago Board of Trade closed higher, corn and wheat up 2½ cents on the prediction that the corn crop would be the smallest since 1901.

The Chicago livestock market was closed to new arrivals due to a strike in the stockyards which were cluttered with 75,000 head of cattle recently purchased by the federal government to live drouth-stricken farmers. Prices on the animals in the yards were steady.

On forecasts from the Weather Bureau of continued drouth, Resolutions Commissioner Elwood Moad said tens of thousands of persons in the Dakotas and eastern slopes of the Rockies "must be moved."

Storm on Gulf

HOUSTON, Texas.—(AP)—A great tropical storm roared over a hundred mile section of the Texas Gulf coast Wednesday night. At least 11 persons were believed drowned by high waves driven over low-lying coastal areas by winds reaching a velocity of at least 60 miles an hour. Damage was expected.

Austin Test Down 650 Feet Thursday

Martin & Co. Assembling Rig—Lentz Test on Houston Land

The Dr. E. L. Austin oil test well, located seven miles south of Hope on the McWilliams land, passed the 650-foot mark Thursday, and was expected to strike the Neotoma sand at a depth of approximately 700 feet.

P. W. Martin & Co. oil firm of Tulsa, moved its big rig here this week from East Texas, and it is being assembled on the Martin test located on the Lafferty land, nine miles south of Hope.

Drilling operations are expected to start before next Tuesday or Wednesday.

The Edgar Johnson test is temporarily shut down, awaiting clearance of land titles. The Johnson well is on the George Jones land, south of Hope on the Falcon road.

It was announced here Thursday that Mr. Lentz, Texarkana driller, would put down a test well on the Joe Houston land, just over the Hempstead line in LaFayette county.

Crippled Children Drive Is Success

The two representatives expressed thanks to the Young Business Men's association, Gus Bernier of the New Capital hotel with whom the two were free guests, and all other organizations that co-operated and to the business and professional men and women who contributed to the fund.

Austria Is Headed by Starhemberg; Civil War Rages

Fascist Chief of Heimwehr Is Chancellor—Battles Nazis

DOLLFUSS IS DEAD

But Nazi Pintelen, Who Sought to Oust Him, Also Is Killed

VIENNA, Austria.—(AP)—The Fascist Heimwehr leader Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, vice-chancellor, Thursday became chief of the Austrian government, succeeding Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss who was slain by a Nazi group in a putsch Wednesday.

Dr. Anton Pintelen, Austrian minister to Rome, who was jailed after the putsch failed to establish him as chancellor, died Thursday after being wounded in his cell. Officials said it was a suicide.

Civil war broke out Thursday as the Nazis battled government forces for control in half a dozen cities in Styria province. The Nazis were reported to be marching in increasing numbers against the combined government army and Heimwehr forces. An official announcement at Graz said that 14 army men were killed and Nazi losses were believed heavy.

Meanwhile, war rumblings were heard over Europe as the result of the menacing situation. Seventy-five thousand troops are concentrated along the border, and the nations pledged to maintain Austrian independence planned to hold a conference Thursday.

Copyright Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria.—A group of Austrian Nazis Wednesday seized the federal chancellery, killed their bitter enemy Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss and held the government building until they were given a guarantee of safe conduct to Germany—a guarantee which was revoked when it was discovered that Dollfuss was dead.

The Nazis—numbering 144—were placed in Marokaner barracks, stripped of their uniforms and were ordered held after a cabinet meeting under the leadership of the new chancellor, Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg, minister of education.

The official communique stated that the fact that Dollfuss was killed cancelled the promise of safe conduct, in return for which the Nazis had surrendered the building and freed other members of the government they had been holding for six and a quarter hours.

Dr. Anton Rintelen, minister to Rome, who is well known to have pro-Nazi leanings and whose name was connected with reports that Nazis were setting up a new government, was placed under arrest. He is one of the most prominent of Austrians in public life in recent years.

Dollfuss was shot to death as the Nazis, under the leadership of men disguised as officers of the Heimwehr (Fascist home guard, loyal government organization), raided the chancellor's office in a sudden "putsch."

Fey Held

Emil Fey, idol of the Heimwehr and former vice-chancellor, was one of those who was held prisoner from 12:45 p. m. to until shortly after 7 Wednesday night and it was through him that negotiations were conducted for the surrender of the building in return for safe transit to the border for the rebels.

While Dollfuss was said by officials after the peace agreement was reached to have been killed immediately, his fate did not become known until the Nazis had been loaded into trucks and started for Germany.

After the day of disorder and excitement, in the course of which an undetermined number of persons were killed, martial law was proclaimed in Vienna and in part of the province of Styria, Nazi stronghold.

Fighting Reported

There were reports of fighting in Styria Wednesday night, an shooting was heard in some sections of Vienna.

Dr. Schuschnigg was named by President Miklas to take over the government as chancellor and began his duties Wednesday night.

The future of the country was belatedly, however, as it did not appear at once what the position of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, vice-chancellor will be. The prince, at first reported in charge of the ministers not captured by the Nazis, later was found to be in Venice. He is expected in Vienna tomorrow.

Whether the naming of Schuschnigg was a temporary affair, was the subject of speculation, as von Starhemberg, a leader of the Heimwehr, was in a strange position.

Shank Given Stay by Supreme Court

Execution Scheduled for Friday Put Off Until Mid-September

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Less than 24 hours before he was to be electrocuted for the poison murder of four persons, Mark H. Shank, Akron (Ohio) attorney, received a stay of execution Thursday to permit the Arkansas Supreme Court to pass on the question whether he should have a sanity hearing.

The court, not now in session, reconvenes September 17.

Attorneys were grabbing at a last straw when they petitioned Justice T. H. Humphrey to stay the execution and allow them a chance to prove Shank is now insane.

After taking the matter under advisement for two hours the justice signed the order.

Defense attorneys are appealing from the ruling of Judge T. G. Pavham at Pine Bluff Wednesday, in which he refused a mandamus writ for a sanity probe.

Shank accepted the news without a tremor and immediately went to sleep.

A. & M. Board Is Likely to Resign

2 of 3 Trustees Under Fire Are Believed Ready to Quit

MONTICELLO.—Trustees of the Monticello A. & M. College and President Frank Horsfall would resign voluntarily if they had the best interests of the institution at heart, C. T. Harris, who recently resigned from the board, declared from the stand Wednesday.

His opinion was expressed to State Senator Arthur Johnson of Star City, sitting as a special master for Governor Futrell at the opening hearing of charges against Trustees J. L. Longino, of Pine Bluff, E. W. Gates of Crossett and W. C. Perdue of Eldorado.

Nothing less than the resignation of the board and president and reorganization of the college's administration will satisfy either the students of the institution or a majority of the taxpayers in the 18 counties embraced in the district, Mr. Harris said. He declared he was expressing his opinion as a result of his observations as a resident of Monticello for 71 years and as a leading business man and banker thoroughly familiar with the feeling throughout the Fourth district.

His testimony, flared into sensationalism at points, climaxed the second and final days of the hearing on the charges on which a complete record will be assembled immediately and presented to Governor Futrell either Monday or Tuesday.

In addition to the completion of the testimony there were several other developments in the case. Outstanding was the ascertaining to a practical certainty that at least two and probably all three of the trustees whose removal is asked in the petition on which the hearing is held, have signed resignations for presentation to Governor Futrell. Friends close to both Mr. Gates and Mr. Perdue said they knew almost for certain that both of them had signed a blanket resignation and sources close to Mr. Longino said they understood he had either signed or planned to sign one.

Lamar Williamson, Monticello attorney and attorney for the board, added strength to the report that they were in a strange position.

England, France and Italy Decide Not to Intervene

Starhemberg as Chancellor Indicates an Orderly Austria

A SERIOUS MOMENT

In Early Hours Thursday Powers Had Planned to Take Action

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—An authoritative source said Thursday that the governments of Great Britain, France and Italy are convinced that no new action by these three powers to defend Austrian independence is necessary in view of developments there.

This source said that the three governments named felt assured that a death blow had been struck at the Nazi movement in Austria by the actions of that group Wednesday.

The same source revealed that earlier Thursday these three nations lost no time in preparing to take action in the Austro-German situation. On the basis of more complete information from Vienna, however, it was predicted they would keep their hands off.

A Precaution Only

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—An official communique announced Thursday that Italian troops had been ordered to the Austrian frontier but declared that this precaution was considered sufficient in view of the improved situation there.

By the Associated Press

With all Italy's military forces held in readiness at orders of Premier Mussolini for any eventuality Wednesday night, an official announcement came from Rome that Austria had requested intervention by European powers to guarantee her integrity.

Every capital in Europe was tense with expectancy and in some cases apprehension was expressed over developments in Austria climaxed by the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss by the Nazis.

Berlin's ambassador to Austria was withdrawn by order of the government, supporting sensational revelations that the ambassador had intervened the Vienna chancellery and shot down Dollfuss. Otherwise, in Germany, at which the venom of the Italian press has been directed for her alleged interference in Austrian affairs, any hint of participation in today's developments met with official denials.

The Italian ambassador to France conferred with French Foreign Minister Barthou and it was said unofficially that telephone lines between Paris, Rome and London were busy with consultations.

France and the Little Entente view Austrian independence as vital to the peace of Europe.

The coincidence of dates was widely remarked upon wherever the day's developments were discussed. It was 20 years to a day after Austria's severance of relations with Serbia which placed Europe on the brink of the World war.

At Praha, Czechoslovakia, an official stated that only Austrian union with Germany would cause the Little Entente to interfere. Assumption of control by Austrian Nazis would be insufficient to cause intervention it was stated.

Premier Mussolini was at Riccione, Italy, where he personally called upon Mme. Dollfuss, widow of the slain chancellor, to offer condolences. The chancellor was to have joined her this week-end at the Italian resort.

Italy Aroused

ROME.—(AP)—War-time military orders were given Wednesday night by Premier Mussolini acting as minister of war, navy and aviation, directing that all military forces in the kingdom be held in readiness for any eventuality as a result of the Austrian developments.

The government-inspired press announced Italy's deep-seated resentment.

Your Health
By DR. MORRIS FISHBURN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

You May Bruise Easily If Stout or Anemic

This is the second of two articles by Dr. Fishburn detailing the care and cure for bruises.

Some people bruise a great deal easier than do others. That is because their blood vessels are more permeable, thus permitting the blood to escape easily and it is also due to a lessened number of blood platelets which are concerned with the control of bleeding.

Fat people and those who are very nervous are also more likely to bruise more easily than do people in good health.

When a bruise occurs the small blood vessels in the skin and perhaps in the muscles are broken, so that the blood comes out into the tissues. The bruise is therefore, so dark at first that it is almost black.

Gradually it changes to blue, then to brown and yellow, and when the blood is finally reabsorbed by the forces of the body, recovery has occurred.

Sometimes a tendon or a muscle will tear, resulting in an excudation of the blood which eventually comes to the surface. This, however, is not to be confused with the bruise which is caused by forces applied from without. The common name for such a condition is "charley horse."

When a severe bruise occurs you should immediately rest the affected part, and if it is an arm or leg elevate the limb so as to aid absorption of the exuded blood.

to stop, or if it spreads, pressure may be applied that will control the bleeding.

There usually is little pain attached to a bruise after the first swelling has occurred. If, however, the swelling continues, or if it is accompanied by fever, the pain may be so severe that medical measures may be necessary. Under such circumstances the application of heat is helpful.

Very rarely does the collected blood under the skin have to be let out. It is the best to have it absorbed from within. However, if the clot does not liquify and if it fails to absorb, it may be necessary for a doctor to let the accumulation of blood out.

As soon as bleeding and acute inflammation has stopped, mild rubbing and massage may be helpful in securing more rapid absorption of the exuded blood.

This Book Tells of the Struggles of Urban Negroes

"Beale Street" is the Story of a Colored Community

By BRUCE CATTON

Beale street, in Memphis, has been called the "Main street of negro America." As such, it seems to be a colorful and interesting place, and its history is the history of how the colored man has adapted himself to city life.

Therefore, George W. Lee's book, "Beale Street—Where the Blues Begin" is an interesting book.

Mr. Lee begins his story far back in the past, in the days when the great Mississippi paddles clustered thickly at the foot of the street and the old south sent the waves of its influence up the river.

He shows how the colored man, after emancipation, began his drift to the cities and how it happened that Beale street became a focal point for such drifters; how a negro community developed there, how the negroes built their own racial life and strove to take their places as self-reliant members of the city.

On Beale street W. C. Handy got his inspiration for his "St. Louis Blues" and similar songs. Here too, colored men built up a great insurance company, which the Ku Klux Klan tried unsuccessfully to take over a decade ago.

Here arose colored theaters, colored business houses, colored political organizations—and, on the surface, appeared such frothy phenomena as fish-fry and barbecue places, gaudy dance halls, lodges and the like.

It makes a strangely interesting story—and a valuable one, too, since it is an excellent study of the struggles and the problems of the urban negro.

Published by Ballou, the book sells for $2.50.

YOUR CHILDREN
By Olive Roberts Barton

Here's Child Who Always "Wants" Things—He Doesn't Mean to "Own," But to "Like" Objects

Many unnecessary bickers about "rights" arise in the family circle. With all due reverence for lessons in unselfishness, there are certain things to remember about possessions.

Take little May, for instance, aged three.

Almost certainly at this age she will develop the habit of saying that everything in the house, yard and points beyond, is hers.

Whether will be playing cards with some friends. May chins herself on the table and licks. "Use are May's cards."

"No, Mother's cards," corrects the lady sweetly but firmly.

"May's cards," insists the infant.

"No—May's cards are over there. Go and get your cards and make something nice. These are Mother's. See!"

"May's cards," the baby gets in her last word.

What Child Means
What is the use of her mother arguing? The truth is that it is not important, because the child of this age has a different idea of possession from ours. It is rather grandiose in its scope. It doesn't mean "right to ownership," as we know it, but merely that it is something included in the child's newly-opening world that interests her.

The other day a daddy—fortunate man—brought home a new car. The old one had been traded in.

Three-year-old Lee scrambled in and stood up on the back seat. "This is Lee's car," he said happily.

"No—Daddy's car. Lee's old car went bye-bye. Now Daddy has a car. This isn't Lee's car."

"Lee's old car went bye-bye," chirped the sparrow. "Lee has a new car."

The argument went on. His daddy thought, "By heck, it's time this young Jesse James stopped considering the world his own oyster. Time he was taught a lesson."

So there is a long harangue. And then a few sharp words. "Lee's car," spoke the trembling lips before the tears came.

And just about all that baby meant was, "Here is something else for me to like. What I like is mine because it is in my world."

Reason Comes With Age
After a bit, of course, say when he is four or five, there comes a real dawn. The possessive case changes character. Personal ownership will have a clearer meaning.

In the meantime he can be taught to share pleasures, and to give. This won't involve his ideas of "rights" so much as "right" and the fact that he must please others and even deprive himself in doing so.

As for the older child and his possessions, parents should recognize that ownership is always sacred. No use giving Bobby a toy and then saying, "Be kind and let Harry use it," when Bobby knows very well that Harry will break it. And one can't dump a dozen new toys in the playroom without designating owners. At least not habitually.

Everybody's belongings and nobody will take care of them. Generosity is important but pride of ownership is important too.

Miss Shearer used to part her hair almost in the middle, comb it back loosely and knit it on the nape of her neck. It framed her face rather cleverly, completely covering her charming ears and hiding part of her forehead and cheeks. Her makeup lacked character and her clothes lacked the vivacious accents and tailored touches that can do so much for a wardrobe. She was lovely but hard-what you could call dashing.

Today, however, she is one of Hollywood's most colorful personalities. You see, she cut her hair, parted it on one side and trained it back from her face in wide, close-to-the-head waves, allowing her lovely smooth forehead and ears to show. Then she set about studying the art of eye-makeup.

Norma Shearer uses eye shadow both for daytime and evening—the right shade, of course, and just the right amount. Her lipstick is applied to make her mouth seem wide and full and her powder is a flattering shade that brings out the best tones of her skin.

Remember that a coiffure can determine your type. If you wear it one way, you look like a certain type—change it and you become something else. And keep in mind, too, that makeup can do a great deal for you. The pale blonde with colorless lashes and eyebrows becomes a more distinct personality the minute she darkens her eyebrows and brows and the brunette adds to her beauty and glamor when she decides on a sleek, sophisticated coiffure and a lipstick that accentuates her mouth. It's perfectly fascinating—this business of changing and improving your appearance—try it and see if you can't!

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes three good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extract, acting when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Beware a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Happiness
Happiness is like a crystal,
Fair and exquisite and clear,
Broken in a million pieces,
Scattered far and near;
Now and then along life's pathway,
Lo, some shining fragments fall.
But there are so many pieces,
No one ever finds them all.
You may find a bit of beauty
Or an honest share of wealth,
While another just beside you
Gathers honor, love or health;
Vain to choose or grasp untidily,
Broken is the perfect ball,
And there are no many pieces,
No one ever finds them all.
No one ever finds them all. Selected.

Slain Wife Was Planning Divorce

Mrs. Thomas' Letter to Husband Found in House by Coroner

LITTLE ROCK.—While R. B. (Tommy) Thomas, 32, was being arraigned in North Little Rock Municipal Court Wednesday on two charges of murder, in connection with the slaying of his wife and Horace F. Steele, 35, cigar stand proprietor, who Thomas said was his wife's paramour, Dr. Lawson C. Aday discovered a letter indicating Mrs. Thomas planned to leave her husband and divorce him.

The letter was found in a drawer in Mrs. Thomas' bedroom at their home, 154 Sheridan road, Park Hill. It was addressed to "Tommy," and read:

"I hate to have to do this, but there is a limit to what I can take. I have done my best, have tried to keep everything down and tried to make it as easy as I could on you.
"You haven't cared a damn about me, only as a servant, and I haven't been appreciated for what I have done as that. So am leaving you for good. Will spend my $20 for a divorce—what I've been saving it for. Probably will surprise you but even though I seemed to enjoy your unkindness and ungratefulness, I hate you beyond words. You needn't worry about me doing you dirt; I will promise I won't, but if you ever lay a hand on me again I'll go the limit. See if you can find some one else to fill my place, ingrate."

The letter was unsigned, and there was no date on it, but Dr. Aday said he was convinced it was written by Mrs. Thomas, probably before she left home several days ago. Thomas said he did not know of such a letter.

Thomas, without an attorney, appeared in the North Little Rock court with deputy sheriffs and waived preliminary hearings on charges of murder. He was held to the grand jury by Judge Wills, and returned to the Pulaski county jail to be held, without bond, until the grand jury meets. Mrs. Thomas' complaint to Dr. Aday, a short time before she died, that her husband frequently mistreated her, was corroborated Wednesday by her father, Cleve R. Berry, rural mail carrier of Conway.

"Thomas mistreated my daughter throughout their married life," he said Wednesday in Conway. "She left him several times and the only reason she returned to him was because of the fear that he would do just what he finally did. He would not permit her to have any friends at all, even among other women, and treated her cruelly at all times."

ment against Germany's interference in Austria and declared the situation extremely serious.

Slightly more than a month since Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Mussolini met in what seemed the most cordial atmosphere in Venice, the government-inspired press was Wednesday viewing with great resentment what it termed German interference in Austria, the nation on whose independence the two government leaders had said they agreed.

Reports that the German ambassador at Vienna had taken part in the arrangement for safe conduct of the killers aroused particular resentment, although these reports were not verified definitely.

Leaves were cancelled, and each unit was told to keep itself in full strength with all of its mechanical war devices in order.

The order applied to 75,000 men north of Padua.

Mrs. Howard and her daughter had been staying at the Socha camp which was engulfed by a great tidal wave at the height of the storm. Singleton was drowned at Freeport. The negroes were reported to have lost their lives near Sargent in Matagorda county, but details of their drownings were not available immediately over the crippled communication lines.

Cotton crops were completely ruin-

19 Million Acres Revert to States

Tax Delinquencies Heaviest in Florida—Second in Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS.—(P)—The "alarming" reversion of land to public ownership because of tax delinquency in seven Southern states was cited Wednesday in a paper released by the United States Southern Forest Experiment station here.

The report, prepared by Ronald B. Craig, assistant forest economist, showed that 19,238,000 acres of land, valued at more than $50,000,000, have reverted to the seven states. Of this area, 12,272,000 acres were estimated to be forest land.

"The effect of such wholesale reversion of forest and agricultural land is patent to anyone," the report stated. "Not only does it render the continued existence of local government precarious, but it also increases the tax burden on the land which is not delinquent."

The reversion of land to the states, which the analysis said began "on a large scale in 1926," increased during the depression years to "phenomenal and alarming proportions," and is "still rising."

The acreage known and estimated to be in public title in the latter part of 1933, by states, was given as follows:

Florida	11,800,000
Alabama	80,000
Mississippi	1,250,000
Louisiana	2,708,000
Arkansas	1,830,000
Oklahoma	600,000
Texas	920,000

Roosevelt Views Hawaiian Crater

President Visits Kilauea Volcano and Hears Its History

HILO, Hawaii—(AP)—Roosevelt, the first American president to set foot on Hawaiian soil, paid a visit Wednesday to Kilauea volcano.

The president spent a quarter hour on the brink of the fire pit hearing the history and description of the volcano by Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, Jr., volcanologist of Hawaiian National Park. A large crowd gathered along the roadside and shouted greetings and Mr. Roosevelt waved back. The road to the volcano was roped off for his protection.

President Roosevelt came here Wednesday morning on his cruise ship, the USS Albatross, and landing, waved a welcome to the large crowd and entered an automobile for a 31-mile ride to the volcano.

He smiled broadly on Sam Spencer, chairman of the local reception committee as he placed about his neck a flower lei, Hawaiian symbol of greeting. It is made of Hawaiian daisies. Spencer then decorated Roosevelt's two sons in similar fashion, while the cameras clicked.

The president's program allowed him several hours in the Kilauea region before returning to Hilo, where a parade was planned before he boarded the USS Albatross for the overnight voyage to Honolulu.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE FERRELL comes to New York determined to show her home town, Hartford, and especially Amy Jackson, that she can make a success of her life. Amy has been her best friend until now—Amy Jackson broke the engagement Jane had forced upon him and married Amy.

In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income. Amy is in a rooming house with THORPE, married, but tired of him. When he offers to hear the story of Jane's life, she indignantly dismisses him. Amy takes the baby, named NANCY, promising never to reveal its parentage.

When America enters the World War Howard enlists in the army and goes to a training camp in Texas. His mother comes to stay with Amy and Howard.

Amy considers to MARY JACKSON that she is expecting a child of her own.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXI

WALKING with Alice made Amy think of Jane, because she and Jane had so often taken this same path. Watching Alice with Nancy reminded Amy of Jane, too, and with a kinder feeling than she had had in the summer. Now and then Mary spoke of Jane, reported something Miss Rosa had told her, something glittering and spectacular. Jane was head of a special committee of business women to sell Liberty Bonds. Jane was making speeches on the steps of the Public Library. Jane's business was growing. She meant to enlarge her offices. Everything was to Jane's importance and success. Amy listened with an amused twinkle. She could perfectly see Jane swanking around, playing her part with dashing conviction, but she felt no tinge of envy. But when, one day late in November, Mary said that Jane was coming to stay with her aunt for the holidays, Amy only commented absently: "That'll please Miss Rosa," and thought no more about it.

The holidays this year meant only to Amy that Howard was sure of his leave for that time. With Howard's coming in view Amy first went through her house like a stern and capricious stranger, and then, with lists beside her, began a series of renovations.

She planned her meals, too, of the dishes Howard liked best. "And if," she said to Mary, "the Food Administration comes along and puts me in jail for it, I'm not going to use a single substitute while Howard's here."

"Go ahead," replied Mary. "I'll aid and abet you and go to jail with you if it's necessary." Presently she added: "Rosa would like us to come to her for Christmas dinner, but I told her we wouldn't think of it."

"I'd rather have no dinner at all than go out anywhere," Mary answered hesitatingly. "Amy—how would it be if I went to Rosa's that day—and let you and Howard be to yourselves? And I could take Nancy—"

"Oh, you make me feel a pig! Do I seem to be trying to crowd you out? Oh no, Mary, please. You belong here. And I want you. It would spoil everything if you went out—and I wouldn't like to send Nancy away either. Especially to Miss Rosa's, while Jane's there—"

"Jane doesn't care much for children, and she rubbed me the wrong way the only time she ever saw Nancy. Very foolish of me, I suppose, but she—well, she said that Nancy wasn't a pretty child and I resented it. I keep on resenting it, too, in a small-minded maternal way."

"Why Amy, you of all people let a chance remark like that rattle you! Does it matter what Jane thinks?"

"Oh no, it doesn't, of course. Not really. But if anyone had told you Howard was a plain little boy you'd have been pleased?"

"I'd have been as mad as hops." "There—you see? And even if it wasn't any question of exposing Nancy to Jane's criticisms, I wouldn't have you go anywhere else for Christmas for the world."

"There was such earnestness and sincerity in her voice that Mary Jackson smiled with gratification. "It's very sweet to have you say that. But truthfully, it doesn't matter so vitally to me to spend the time with Howard as it does you. Ever since he's been grown I've trained myself to be content just to know that he's well and happy somewhere, even when he's not with me. It saves such a lot of emotional wear and tear on both of us."

Amy shook her head doubtfully. "I don't believe I'll ever feel that way about my son," she said.

If she had not had so many things to do Amy could hardly have existed through the last weeks before Howard came.

HER beauty bloomed in expectation. Sometimes Mary Jackson and her mother spoke of it. There was something beyond reality in it. Her eyes did not see them but only her great happiness, her mouth was curved and red and soft, her skin was translucently fair. She was luminous, radiant, waiting. In the very last days she did not talk very much. She was with Howard as he took his way toward her. She knew the hour when he started, the moment of each stop, just where his train would be every mile of the way.

And then, miracle, he was there! Tall and strong, cold from the keen winter outside, but with a living and hearty cold that is akin to heat, dropping his cap, his gloves on the floor, smothering her against his greatcoat, holding her, saying her name—"Amy, Amy—Amy—Amy!" telling her all that she needed to know in that one word.

"Oh, but let me look at you!" she said, drawing away a little, but holding him tight. "Why, I do believe you've grown! And what a proud, elegant uniform! And the wings! Oh Howard—you're grand!"

He could say nothing but her name, and he had tears in his eyes like a child wanting consolation. Finally he stammered: "It was too long. I felt as if all about McClintic in the Seventh by about the same margin.

Incumbent nominees are Wesley Disney, First District representative who had a majority in the July 3 voting. Wilburn Cartwright and Jed Johnson, nominated Tuesday in the Third and Sixth districts and the congressman-at-large with the popular name—Will Rogers.

Rogers beat Henry S. Johnston, impeached governor, by more than 40,000.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Belief by lawyers at the Farm Administration that the Bankhead control bill would be legally suspended this year has increased speculation as to whether the compulsory measure would be applied to this year's crop.

Lawyers believe that the president may suspend the operation of the bill at any time before 1935.

Farm officials said, however, that they had taken no stand in the matter and that growers who want the bill set aside would have to petition the president. They said that they were going ahead with plans for the application of the legislation which levies a tax on all cotton sold this year in excess of approximately 10,400,000 bales.

The continued drought in Texas and the West, however, has led to many inquiries as to whether a move will be made to suspend the bill should the August 8 crop report forecast a yield well below the total allotment under the measure.

A normal yield on the basis of the government's acreage forecast, would be less than the tax-free quota fixed by the bill.

The contention has been made, however, that the bill's aim would be attained should the cotton crop fall below 10,400,000 bales.

"Jane doesn't care much for children, and she rubbed me the wrong way the only time she ever saw Nancy. Very foolish of me, I suppose, but she—well, she said that Nancy wasn't a pretty child and I resented it. I keep on resenting it, too, in a small-minded maternal way."

"Why Amy, you of all people let a chance remark like that rattle you! Does it matter what Jane thinks?"

"Oh no, it doesn't, of course. Not really. But if anyone had told you Howard was a plain little boy you'd have been pleased?"

"I'd have been as mad as hops." "There—you see? And even if it wasn't any question of exposing Nancy to Jane's criticisms, I wouldn't have you go anywhere else for Christmas for the world."

"There was such earnestness and sincerity in her voice that Mary Jackson smiled with gratification. "It's very sweet to have you say that. But truthfully, it doesn't matter so vitally to me to spend the time with Howard as it does you. Ever since he's been grown I've trained myself to be content just to know that he's well and happy somewhere, even when he's not with me. It saves such a lot of emotional wear and tear on both of us."

Amy shook her head doubtfully. "I don't believe I'll ever feel that way about my son," she said.

If she had not had so many things to do Amy could hardly have existed through the last weeks before Howard came.

HER beauty bloomed in expectation. Sometimes Mary Jackson and her mother spoke of it. There was something beyond reality in it. Her eyes did not see them but only her great happiness, her mouth was curved and red and soft, her skin was translucently fair. She was luminous, radiant, waiting. In the very last days she did not talk very much. She was with Howard as he took his way toward her. She knew the hour when he started, the moment of each stop, just where his train would be every mile of the way.

And then, miracle, he was there! Tall and strong, cold from the keen winter outside, but with a living and hearty cold that is akin to heat, dropping his cap, his gloves on the floor, smothering her against his greatcoat, holding her, saying her name—"Amy, Amy—Amy—Amy!" telling her all that she needed to know in that one word.

"Oh, but let me look at you!" she said, drawing away a little, but holding him tight. "Why, I do believe you've grown! And what a proud, elegant uniform! And the wings! Oh Howard—you're grand!"

He could say nothing but her name, and he had tears in his eyes like a child wanting consolation. Finally he stammered: "It was too long. I felt as if all

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Belief by lawyers at the Farm Administration that the Bankhead control bill would be legally suspended this year has increased speculation as to whether the compulsory measure would be applied to this year's crop.

Lawyers believe that the president may suspend the operation of the bill at any time before 1935.

Farm officials said, however, that they had taken no stand in the matter and that growers who want the bill set aside would have to petition the president. They said that they were going ahead with plans for the application of the legislation which levies a tax on all cotton sold this year in excess of approximately 10,400,000 bales.

Roosevelt to See Reclamation Jobs on Return Trip

Reclamation projects will receive major attention of President Roosevelt on his journey across the country to Washington, after he disembarks from the cruiser Albatross in Portland, Ore., Aug. 3. Following the route shown here, he will inspect Bonneville, Coulee and Ft. Peck dams, as well as halt at Devil's Lake, N. D., for a study of water table subsidence and its aggravation of the drought. Another project that will be viewed is the $33,500,000 PWA lock, channel, and dam work on the upper Mississippi River. The president is scheduled to reach Washington on Aug. 11.

1,000 New Planes Urged for U. S. A.

Air Corps "Second to None" Recommended by Baker Committee

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Warning that the first clashes of the next great war will take place in the air, the War Department's special aviation committee Sunday recommended the building of an Army Air Corps second to none.

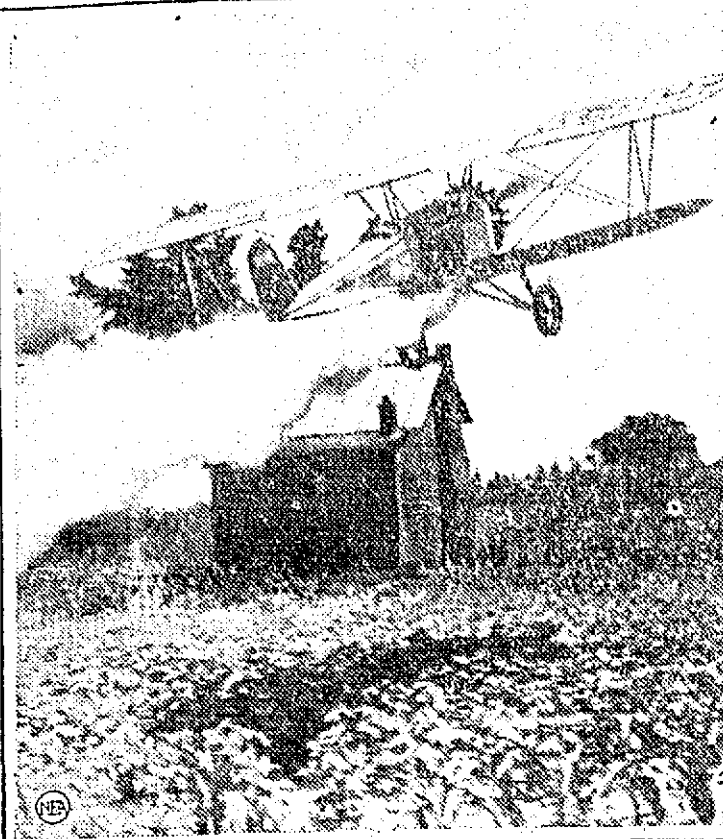

The committee of 11 well known civilians and generals, headed by Newton D. Baker, capped an exhaustive three months' inquiry into Air Corps conditions with a call for "more financial support" for military aviation. Laying down five major recommendations, the committee's report to Secretary Dern urged a 10-year development program. Outstanding was a call for quick acquisition of 1,000 new planes.

Conspicuous in the report also was praise for the spirit and manner in which the army carried the air mail under difficulties. With this was mingled implied criticism of actual performance, charged to equipment and training.

"The next great war," the report asserted, "is likely to begin with engagements between opposing aircraft, either sea-based or land-based, and early aerial supremacy is quite likely to be an important factor."

"An adequate aircraft industry is essential to national defense. The army's air forces must be ready at all times for war service."

Death at 100 M.P.H. for Weevil

Last year plowing under cotton—this year dusting it over. Here a Stearman "cotton duster" plane spreads death at 100 miles an hour to the boll weevil, rearing over a field near Hughes, Ark., in the Mississippi Delta. In one dive across the field the pilot leaves a film of arsenate of lead across the cotton plants. The dusting is done early in the morning, so that the poison is assimilated by the dew, which is drunk by the weevil. With reduced acreage under the AAA program, growers are seeking maximum production.

Science Dissolves Fog by New Spray

Secret Liquid Magically Clears Airport for Distance of 2,000 Feet

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. —(AP)—Fog, deadliest menace of the aviator and the mariner, has been able to disappear.

Chemical dissipation of fog over limited areas was tested for the first time last Friday by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Round Hill research station at South Dartmouth, it became known Saturday.

The minutes after nozzles fitted into a 100-foot long pipe began pouring a secret chemical into a rolling fog which had enveloped the airport on the Round Hill estate of Col. E. H. R. Green, where the technology station is located, a building 2,000 feet away stood clearly revealed against a background of turbulent walls of white vapor.

The experiments were carried on under the direction of Henry H. Houghton, a member of the institute's research staff.

The chemical employed possessed the ability to collect or condense water vapor in the air, causing it to be precipitated to the ground as rain-drops fall.

It is a well known scientific fact that fog cannot form in absolutely clean air since it is necessary for the atmosphere to be filled with fine particles which in turn constitute the nuclei on which the infinitesimal droplets form. In sea fogs these particles are invisible grains of salt tossed into the air by breaking waves.

Friday's experiment was made after several days of waiting for a fog. The pipe had been suspended horizontally, 30 feet above the ground and the centrifugal pumps were in readiness to drive the mixture through the pipes. Night was at hand when a fog bank drifted in from Buzzard's bay.

As soon as it had enveloped the airport the nozzles began to spray the atmosphere with the chemical and within a few seconds the fog drifted through the falling chemical curtain turned to a precipitation.

Suddenly a path of visibility approximately 100 feet wide and 30 feet high began to open in a northwesterly direction as if a huge invisible plow were moving through the enshrouding vapors.

It continued to open wider and wider as the relative humidity dropped off sharply until within three minutes buildings on the opposite side of the airport, 2,000 feet away were clearly visible.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

McCalah Speaks the Truth
Text: 1 Kings 22:1-14
The International Uniform Sunday
BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of Advance

Kings and commoners when they want to do some particular thing and have more or less made up their minds to do it, frequently seek advice. The counselor who advises them against it, no matter how wise or just his advice may be, is likely to get himself disliked for his pains, no matter how much the king or the commoner may have urged him to be frank.

Much of the time when we seek advice, we want to have our own judgment confirmed rather than upset, and we tend to value our counselors somewhat according to whether they give us pleasant and favorable, or discouraging words.

Here, in our lesson, King Ahab of Israel had set himself upon a certain course. He wanted to regain Ramoth Gilead, then in the possession of the king of Syria.

He turned to Jehoshaphat, king of Judah for help. Jehoshaphat was willing to give him assistance and to ally his people, his horses and flocks with those of Ahab, but he suggested that first of all it might be wise to inquire of the Lord.

I suppose that pagan peoples would have said "consult an oracle." This was practically what it amounted to, for Ahab called in some hundreds of prophets: who were ministers of pleasant words, rather than clear-sighted and honest advisers.

They sensed what Ahab wanted them to say, and they said it, telling him to go on and fight for Ramoth, because the Lord would deliver it into his hands.

Jehoshaphat apparently sensed something rather unsound about it. He did not seem to have very great confidence in this group of prophets and he wanted to know if there was not still another whose judgment they might seek.

Ahab told him there was such a man, Micaiah by name, but that he hated him and did not want to get his word because Micaiah did not prophesy good things concerning him but evil.

Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, was urgent about the matter however, and Ahab sent to have Micaiah brought. Micaiah seems first of all to have mocked the false prophets and to have spoken to Ahab in much the same words.

Ahab apparently sensed the fact that Micaiah was mocking him and then Micaiah dared immediately to speak out the truth, telling him that his armies would be scattered and that his own life would be lost.

Instead of listening to him, Ahab turned to Jehoshaphat and said, "Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me up to battle and it turned out as Micaiah had predicted. They suffered a most inglorious defeat. Jehoshaphat was killed in the battle and Ahab, who had discarded his kingly robes, was killed by an arrow shot at a venture as he tried to escape.

Protein-Rich Peanuts Help Balance Vegetable Dinner

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

As vegetables come into the market in greater variety, the vegetable plate dinner becomes more important in the home-maker's life. For skillful use of many vegetables during the summer makes for both economy and health.

There are several important points to keep in mind in planning vegetable plate meals. The structure of the vegetables, the method of cooking and serving, and food values must be considered. Contrast of color and flavor should influence the choice as well as the method of cooking and serving. If one vegetable is to be creamed, have a second plain with butter, a third grilled or broiled, and a fourth done into a fritter, timbale or croquette.

Low in Protein

Remember, too, that while all vegetables contain at least a trace of protein, it won't be enough to keep the balance between the give-out and the intake of energy. Also vegetable protein is of poorer quality than that found in other sources. Consequently, nuts, eggs, cheese and milk should be introduced into vegetable plates to restore balance.

Cheese may be added to the white sauce served with vegetables such as cauliflower, potatoes and tomatoes. Summer squash and eggplant are good with cheese melted over them. Toasted cheese sandwiches may be served with any combination of vegetables to furnish protein.

Either poached or hard cooked eggs add interest to vegetable combinations.

Peanuts With Vegetables

Tomatoes or peppers stuffed with a combination of rice and peanuts finely chopped are particularly good for an August dinner. Other nuts may be used, but peanuts are cheap and rich in protein. Peanuts combine well with nearly all vegetables by the way.

The following vegetable combinations, chosen for color and flavor, may suggest others: Stuffed baked tomatoes, creamed celery, corn-on-the-cob, buttered peas.

A simple dessert of fresh fruit may follow this meal.
